“Guernica fights the truly deadly habit, a sickness of our own time... of taking violent evil in our stride, of yawning at the video-massacre: seen it before; go away; don’t spoil the fun of art. Guernica wasn’t made for fun. It was made to rip away the scar tissue, rob us of our sleep. It did. So in every way that mattered Picasso had won, art had won, humanity had won.” “The Power of Art” - Simon Schama

Slaughterhousespace is pleased to announce PULSE POINTS, an installation of video and large-scale sculptures by Pat Lenz with Dottie Richolson. The exhibition presents the artists’ response to turbulent events of the past few years. The dynamic interplay of sensual forms, enhanced with complementary videos, in an extraordinary surrounding, enables the viewer to participate in an intimate dialogue with the works.
